CHATTANOOGA: TUESDAY MORNING, OCT. 7, 1862.

WHAT TENNESSEE HAS DONE. We regret to learn a disposition has bee manifested in some places to underate th efforts which have been made, the sacrifice which have been submitted to, and the su ferings which have been endured by Tenpes see since this war commenced. Even, i some instances, the gallantry of our troop has been questioned and sneering remark have been made concerning their conduct on the field of battle. We say we regret to hear that such things have taken place, be cause they are calculated to produce a feel ing of resentment which might do much harm and is highly detrimental to our cause There should be nothing but the kindes feelings between the people of the various States in the Confederacy, and all remarks calculated or intended to cast reflections up on the people or soldiers of any State should be carefully avoided by every true patriot We have a common enemy, which to success fully resist will require all our united and most energetic efforts without doing or say ing anything to engender bad feelings be tween the citizens or soldiers of the various States. We make these remarks now be cause we learn from soldiers of Tennessee that their feelings have often been deeply wounded by reflections cast upon their State which they knew to be unjust and unfounded. What Tennessee has done on the battle field let Belmont, Fort Donelson, Shiloh and Richmond, Kentucky, say. All of these battles, which were among the most gallantly contested fields on the continent, were fought principally by Tennesseans. Gen. Buck ner's report shows that a mere handful of men held their ground for days against vastly superfor numbers until they were worn out with hunger, fatigue and cold. His army corps which did such splendid fighting was composed mostly of Tennesseans, assisted by one or two Kentucky and Mississippi regi ments. We wish we had the reports from all the regiments engaged at Shiloh. We feel satisfied they would show that more batteries were taken by Tennesseans than by troops from any other State and most of the killed and wounded on those two days were Tennesseaps. The battles of Belmont, Donelson and Shilok were fought against the best troops of the North, and in no one has the number of killed and wounded been as great as that of Shiloh. The important victory won by Gen. Kirby Smith at Richmond, Kentucky, was principally by Gen. Preston Smith's brigade composed entirely and Gen. Cleburne's mostly of Tennessee regiments. We do not wish to detract anything from the gallautry and well carned reputation of the troops from other States. We feel proud of our soldiers as well those from Alabama, Mississippi and other States as Tennessee. but we simply desire that Tennessee may receive justice and may enjoy that reputation for which her sons have so gallantly fought and so heroically suffered. The three Tennessee regiments that have remained in Virginia and have been engaged in all the battles in Virginia, and Maryland, have been almost destroyed. The Colonels of two of the regiments have been killed, and how many of the other officers and men we are unable to state positively, though we county, Tenn., who had been a strong Union our troops at Lavergne, seventeen miles from gallant 15th Mississippi displayed a desperate courage at Fishing Creek, which had it not been for particular circumstances for General, and I'll take it out." which the troops were not to blame, would "Oh!" said Gen. In addition the State of Tennessee armed and equipped a provisional force of over forty thousand men at a cost of near five millions of dollars wer four millions of which is still due to he State of Tennessee by the Confederate Government. Although the greater portion of Tennessee has been occupied by the ene my, still the State has paid $1,100,000 of the Confederate war tax. Had Tennessee refused to go with the South and contribute of her abundance to sustain the Southern armies, what would have been the condition of the South at this time? Although the State has been in a great portion overrun by the existing insurrection, and as a necessary measure for suppliessing the same, all rebels and the urgents. State, with a few shameful exceptions, proved truer and more devoted to the South under such trying circumstances. They have martial law, and liable to trial and punishment by been robbed of their property, thousands and tens of thousands of their negroes have been taken, but in the main they faltered not in their devotion to the South. It is, therefore, not only unjust but unkind and ungrateful in the citizens of any other South ern State to speak disparagingly of Tennessee. We speak on this subject impartially, for whifst a citizen of Tennessee, and justly proud of the noble conduct of her soldiers the acts of our forces on the river : and the self-sacrificing spirit of her people, Special Order No 254. we have many friends and relatives in the army from other States, and we feel doubly solicitous that there should always exist between Tennessee and the other States the ment which has taken place has not been caused by Tennessee, and we trust that a move any unkind feelings which, we regret from Memphis. to say, do now exist to some extent.
